Rielle maintains a general litigation practice, driven by her dedication to understanding the unique needs and challenges of each client. She has dealt with matters at all levels of court in Alberta, and her experience spans a broad range of legal issues, allowing her to offer practical and versatile solutions.

During law school, Rielle served on the editorial board of the Alberta Law Review and was a member of the Faculty of Law Curriculum Committee. She also gained valuable insights during a clerkship course with the Alberta Court of Justice, and worked as a research assistant, focusing on energy law.

Rielle is actively involved in the legal community as a volunteer with the Edmonton Community Legal Centre. She also dedicates her time to the broader community, serving on the board of a large Alberta non-profit social services agency.

In her personal time, Rielle enjoys pickleball, golf, traveling, and spending time with her book club discussing a wide range of literature.
